At TUT's Table

A talk by Prof. Joann Fletcher including Light Lunch

Jo takes a look at the food and drink enjoyed by Tutankhamun and his family, from their love of roast beef, rack of lamb and crispy duck to the chickpeas and lentils enhanced with onions, garlic and spices. Egypt's royal family also consumed a wide range of alcoholic drinks, from speciality beers to imported wines, vintage reds and Egypt's earliest known white wine, a favourite of Tutankhamun himself. Situated in the Town Hall, the talk will take place in Room 2, with food provided by The Old George Café.

Inside TUT's Wardrobe

A talk by Prof. Joann Fletcher with Afternoon Tea

Here Jo examines the clothes, jewellery, cosmetics and regalia worn by Tutankhamun and his family, from gold-studded robes of state to faux-fur priestly robes and clothing made for the royal children. Jo will also highlight Tutankhamun's extensive collections of footwear and underwear, while the royal family's spectacular jewellery, distinctive hairstyles, lavish perfumes and iconic makeup are so timeless they still inspire modern couture.

Did you know

The ancient Egyptians made special feeding bottles for babies, and they used poppy extract to make them stop crying. A medical text from Tutankhamun's time prescribes mixing "capsules of poppy and fly dung, strain, and take for 4 days; the infant stops crying immediately".

Resurrecting Ancient Egypt: A Monumental Yorkshire Journey

A Touring Exhibition from Barnsley Museums

This exclusively commissioned body of work by Kyte Photography, designed and curated by Professor Joann Fletcher, looks at the Egyptian inspired architecture found throughout Yorkshire. It reflects the West's enduring fascination with Egypt's ancient monuments, long regarded as the ultimate symbols of immortality, copied and constructed for centuries right across Europe.

DeMorgan Foundation Lecture on Demand

Focusing on his work with the Egyptian Government in 1893, this lecture will explore William De Morgan's interest in Egyptian glaze pottery. This fascinating lecture explores how De Morgan worked with potters and archaeologists to conduct research into the different clay deposits in Egypt, documenting the feasibility of glazed pottery manufacture and creating a comprehensive history of Egyptian pottery.

The Speaker

Hannah N Mills is a PhD candidate in the School of Fine Art, History of Art and Cultural Studies at the University of Leeds. Her PhD research is focused around the home of Frederic Leighton, being a centre of experimentation; from its very conception to the work that it inspired in its craftsmen who worked on the building.

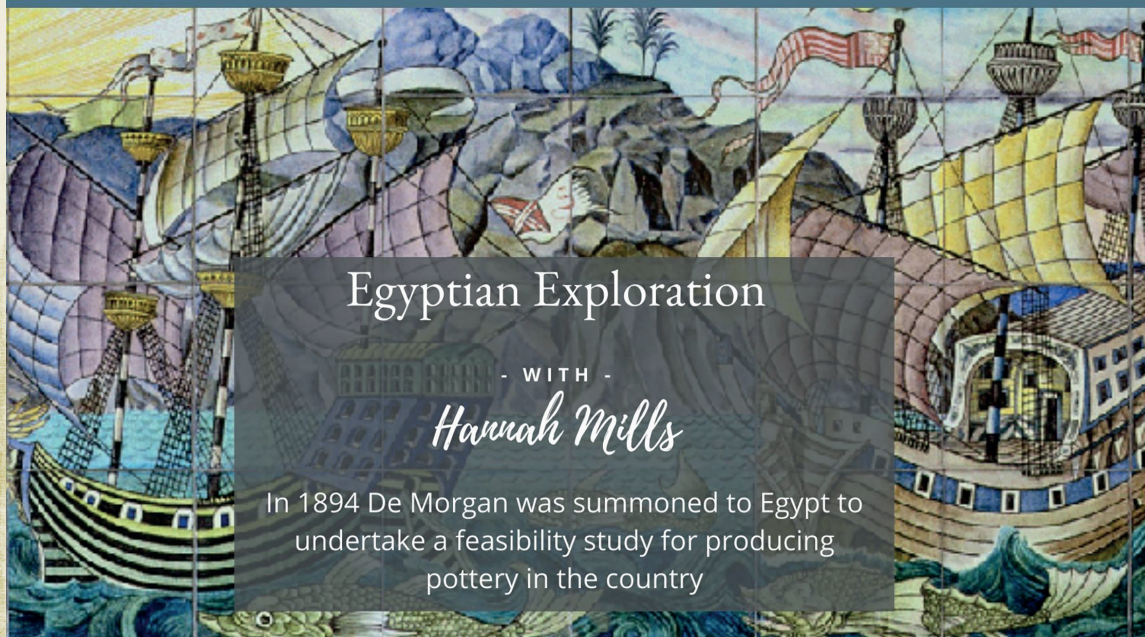

How to watch

When you purchase this lecture, you will see a link to download a recording at checkout. This is not a ticket to a live broadcast, it is a recording.
